Our Stories of Resilience

This past year has brought immense challenges. We've got new stories to tell and to hear: stories that connect us in new and extraordinary ways to ourselves and to each other. What's been helping you get through?

What's been especially hard? What's surprised you? What new gifts are emerging? What's seen? What's unseen? What feels important to share about your journey? How are we— individually and collectively, in-person and digitally— finding new ways to sustain ourselves and each other?

Join True Story Theater for this online community-building improvisational theatre experience in which personal stories from audience volunteers are transformed respectfully into theatre pieces on the spot. Our theater can offer some new perspective, a space to be seen and better understood, a memorable arts experience, and an enhanced sense of connection and empathy for others.
